The Tourism & Health “early warning & response”
Information System (THiS) for improving traveler's health

Getting sick during travel is dreadful. However, we have all been sick or had a friend or family fall ill while travelling. After planning a vacation or business trip, it is unfortunate to fall ill and not be able to enjoy your stay to the fullest. Travelling puts us at risk of illness, as we often travel to new climates, and share close spaces with individuals from all over the world.

We can help control the spread of illnesses by knowing when and where it is occurring as soon as possible. This is why the Caribbean Public Health Agency (CARPHA) has designed the Tourism and Health early warning and response Information System (THiS)! The system allows hotels, guesthouses, and visitors to report their illness as soon they begin to feel sick. Early reporting will promote faster response and reduce the escalation and spread of illness.

The information collected will help us understand what is your likely illness, how and where illnesses are circulating and allow us to know how to better support hotels/guesthouses to minimize the spread of illnesses and reduce the risk to you and your friends and family.

Only information necessary to carry out these tasks is asked. We take the utmost care to protect the confidentiality of the information you provide.

So if you’re feeling sick, give us 2 minutes of your time to report it ... because we care about your health and well-being while you are with us.
